LUCY YOUNG

VICTORY AS KEN CLEARS HIS NAME

Police admit wrongful arrest of their own gang mediator

Success: Ken Hinds received £22,000 and an apology from the police

By Lucy Purdy

A RESPECTED gang mediator who was wrongly arrested while he watched a stop-and-search at Seven Sisters Underground station has won a £22,000 payout from British Transport Police.

Ken Hinds said he was sworn at and threatened by officers when he stopped to watch a teenager being searched by police at the Tube station in 2004.

He was arrested and charged with threatening behaviour, sparking a five-year battle to clear his name.

But last week, with the force facing an imminent High Court trial over Mr Hinds' claims of false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, a senior officer apologised in writing and agreed to the compensation sum and also to foot the legal expenses bill.

It is seen as an embarrassing climbdown for the police because Mr Hinds chairs a stop-and-search monitoring group in Haringey and sits on the Metropolitan Police's Trident independent advisory group, assisting senior officers on how to rebuild trust and confidence within London's black communities.

He also runs the popular community and carnival band

"I knew my rights and I wasn't going to move."

Ruff Diamond Explosion.

The 50-year-old was arrested as he was waiting to pick up his 12-year-old son on May 28, 2004, when he spotted a 19-year-old black youth being stopped and searched by police.

Speaking to the Advertiser, Mr Hinds recounted the day of his arrest, which he said is permanently engraved upon his mind.

He said: "What caught my attention was this young man with eight or nine police around him. I even thought it looked a bit comical at first but that it could turn serious, so I stopped to watch."

"He looked alarmed and I wanted him to have a witness if anything happened. All of a sudden, this policeman came up to me and told me to f off."

"I said I knew my rights and wasn't going to move, so he beckoned his mate over, put my hands behind my back and handcuffed me. I was arrested, taken to Wood Green police station and charged."

Mr Hinds, of Church Street, Edmonton, stood trial the following year but was acquitted after the court heard that statements from the two officers involved were suspiciously similar.

In an ensuing misconduct inquiry, it was revealed one officer had emailed the other his statement. Both officers received written warnings.

A spokesman for BTP this week attributed the officers' actions to "inexperience and not malice" and admitted that they had fallen below the standard the force expected.

Campaign bid to call time on binge-drinking

A CAMPAIGN is running this week to combat binge-drinking in Haringey after the number of alcohol-related hospital admissions doubled in the past five years.

Figures show that about 10,000 adults in Haringey are drinking at harmful levels and that 14 per cent of people in the borough binge drink. The rate of alcohol-related deaths of men in Haringey is higher than the London average and there were 3,200 alcohol-related crimes from 2007 to 2008.

This week's campaign, as part of Alcohol Awareness Week, will drive home the message that alcohol abuse can have serious impacts on drinkers and their families.

Gail Priddey is deputy director of Haringey Advisory Group on Alcohol, which receives referrals from doctors, hospitals and social workers. The group supports more than 700 people each year, including helping chronic drinkers detox, working with street drinkers and running groups and workshops six days a week. Since a Comic Relief funding boost last year, HAGA has also been able to help young people aged 14 and over who have developed alcohol problems.

Ms Priddey said: "Heavy drinking is usually symptomatic of other problems. It can lead to lots of different problems in families, including domestic violence and children being put at risk."

An open day will be held on Friday, including workshops about recommended levels of alcohol, events in schools and an information stand at Wood Green library in High Road. Contact HAGA on 020 8800 6999.

‘These rookie foot-soldiers spoil it for great policemen’

But Mr Hinds warned that experiences such as his “breed tension and mistrust”, particularly among disaffected youngsters. He said: “This officer said he was intimidated by me, but I believe he felt he had just joined the police force and was going to use it to get his own way. I challenged his authority and he wasn’t having it.

“This just confirms to young people that the police are not people to go and engage with. And if you’re feeling frustrated and can’t go and beat the police to get your own back, you’re going to pick on a vulnerable member of your community. These rookie foot-soldiers spoil it for great policemen, seasoned officers who do things by the book.

“I’ve come across some great policing but there are bad apples in every industry – it’s how you expose them so the whole bowl doesn’t get contaminated. It took me five years to prise an apology out of them.”

After last week’s eleventh-hour settlement, a one-paragraph statement from British Transport Police was faxed to Mr Hinds’ solicitors, Bhatt Murphy. It read: “The British Transport Police regrets

A YEAR ago, Ken Hinds received a commendation from the Met for his courageous work in tackling knife gangs in north London.

Even this week, as news broke of his £22,000 payout, he was meeting with parents of gang members in Haringey as part of an ongoing Home Office-backed gang mediation project.

He showed them clips of youths as young as 13 threatening each other on Facebook and YouTube, forcing them to confront their children’s involvement in the bitter gang rivalries which have blighted areas including Tottenham and Edmonton in past years.

“These kids make videos round each other’s houses then post them on the internet,” said Mr Hinds. “Some of the parents are in denial and some are even in collusion, so it’s really important to get the message to them.”

As a youth outreach worker, Ken visits schools across the capital to encourage children to talk out their issues rather than resort to violence, and is also chairman of a monitoring group for stop-and-search in Haringey.

In 2007 he set up a transparent police cell on the streets of Wood Green and Tottenham to warn youngsters about what faces them if they get involved in gun and knife crime.

the circumstances in which Kenneth Hinds was asked to move away from officers conducting a stop-and-search of a young black male at Seven Sisters Underground Station on May 28, 2004 and wishes to apologise for this. No admission is made of liability.”

MPs cleared in expenses investigation

HARINGEY MPs have received a clean bill of health in the latest turn in the expenses scandal.

Both David Lammy, MP for Tottenham, and Lynne Featherstone, MP for Hornsey and Wood Green, received letters last week from Sir Thomas Legg, the former civil servant tasked with reviewing MPs’ claims, confirming they are in the clear.

When the scandal erupted earlier this year, Ms Featherstone was named a “saint” by The Daily Telegraph newspaper for refusing to claim for a second home, despite being eligible under now-discredited rules.

Liberal Democrat MP Ms Featherstone said: “The Legg review is a good thing. MPs are not above the law and, where they have made improper claims, they should be made to repay them. In this way, hopefully, we can slowly start restoring people’s trust.”

Figures from 2007/8 reveal that Ms Featherstone claimed £129,431 in expenses and Mr Lammy claimed £133,224 – among the lowest claims in parliament.

Two passport factories closed as police pledge to win war on identity theft

By Lucy Purdy

TWO illegal fake passport factories have been raided in Haringey in the past nine months.

Four men have been put behind bars and equipment to create thousands of forged documents has been seized by officers from the Metropolitan Specialist Crime Directorate, as they work against the clock to prevent criminal gangs turning London into the identity theft capital of the world.

Police say forged documents can be worth millions of pounds on the black market.

False identity factories have been discovered in Hornsey and Tottenham, with officers finding huge piles of forged passports, national insurance documents and bank cards behind seemingly innocuous front doors.

Algerian nationals Nacer Boudela, 40, and his 32-year-old brother Farouk were arrested on February 11 this year after officers found the duo had stashed fake Dutch and Belgian passports, sophisticated printing equipment and £5,500 in cash in their house in Hillfield Avenue. Nacer received a five-year jail term and Farouk 18 months when they were sentenced at Southwark Crown Court in June.

In Tottenham, national insurance cards and forged bank cards were discovered when police raided a flat in Philip Lane on March 17. Brazilian-born Rodolpho De Paula Gomes, 28, and Luiz de Oliveira were later sentenced to three years, nine months and two years respectively for crimes relating to identification fraud.

The factories unearthed in Haringey are part of what is believed to be a multi-million-pound racket in the capital.

The Met has built up a database of about 30,000 fake identities currently in circulation around London and used in crimes ranging from immigration offences and benefit fraud to large cash scams. Documents including utility bills and driving licences are also used to open bank accounts under false names.

Operation Maxim was set up to deal specifically with these crimes alongside Project Genesis, in which officers work closely with manufacturers of printing equipment to stop them falling into the hands of criminals.

Poster girl Kani wins trip of a lifetime by putting global friendship in picture

A TEENAGER from Tottenham will fly to Taiwan next month after designing a poster about what it means to be a global citizen.

Northumberland Park Community School pupil Kani Dinh is one of four students from the UK invited to attend the Education Expo in capital city Taipei from November 25.

The 13-year-old was named as one of the winners by Malaysian shoe designer Jimmy Choo and will spend five days visiting different regions of the country alongside youngsters from Japan, Korea, Thailand, Indonesia, Malaysia and Vietnam. The Connecting Classrooms project is organised and funded by the British Council in partnership with the Taiwanese Ministry of Education.

Professor Choo said: "It is fantastic to see young people so enthusiastic about building links between the UK and Asia. It's more important than ever that we ensure our young people develop the skills and understanding they need to live and work in our global society, and experiences like this are vital."

Kani and the other pupils will work together on projects to explore themes of climate change, sport, health, science and invention.

After exploring Taiwan to research their subjects they will present their findings to more than 280 teachers and education chiefs.

Councillor Lorna Reith, cabinet member for children at Haringey Council, said: "This is a fantastic opportunity for Kani and I'm sure she will have an interesting and educational trip. We are proud of her for winning this competition and look forward to hearing what she learns from the experience."

Connecting Classrooms, which launches globally this year, already connects hundreds of UK schools with their counterparts in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Middle East. Organisers aim to link 30,000 schools and two million young people worldwide by 2013.

Getting the needle: stallholder Prilly Lewis

NEEDLEWORK doesn't have the coolest of images, as far as leisure activities go. It conjures up images of elderly women crocheting in their rocking chairs or silver-haired ladies cracking out their knitting on the bus. But a snapshot of the crowds at the recent Knitting and Stitching Show at Alexandra Palace revealed a surprising number of youngsters rubbing shoulders with more senior stalwarts of the sewing world. Could the theory being peddled in all the lifestyle magazines really be true? Is it now trendy to hazard a career in haberdashery? Is it really hip to knit?

By Lucy Purdy

TEXTILES student Steph White, 14, is taking a break from the staggering array of textile-related stalls and sitting on the floor chatting with friends, most of whom have knitting needles in their hands, along with the essential teen accessory, mobile phones.

"When you know how to do it, it's really easy," she explained.

"Quite a lot of my friends knit now and it's really fun and creative. We learn it at school and we knit weird things like cupcakes and fruit!"

A newly emerging, wilder side of needlecraft can be seen elsewhere in the show. London designer Prilly Lewis, 45, is manning a stall near the entrance, selling her unique, machine-knitted coats, jackets, cushions and accessories.

Made in beautifully soft lambs-wool and featuring her trademark pompom buttons, beaded cuffs and pastel-shade stripes and spots, Prilly's designs also feature quirky prints of celebrities of Marilyn Monroe and Elvis. I asked her why she had chosen to immortalise the Mona Lisa on to a cushion? "I just think it's unique," she laughed.

"My products are eye-catching and striking as well as having a really warm and soft texture – they make great presents and people really seem to like them."

Further inside Ally Pally's Great Hall, 52-year-old artist and designer Louise Baldwin is exhibiting her fantastically coloured collages.

Starting with images plucked from magazines, newspapers and even food packaging, Louise builds up beautiful pictures by working knitting, stitching and appliqué on top. She sees the annual show as a great opportunity to meet fellow artists, potential buyers and others with a shared interest in textiles.

"It's not uncool any more," she said. "Before, knitting and stitching would be things you kept quiet about but there are so many youngsters and students here today, asking about my work – it's hectic. I think the resurgence among young people in this kind of work is fantastic and it keeps them off the PlayStation!"

But the old faithful lynchpins of stitching are still going strong too.

I chatted to the lovely Margaret Armstrong, 69, who quietly mentioned she is an ex-president of the Quilters' Guild of the British Isles.

As well as having groups all over the UK and further afield, the guild works to promote the heritage of quilting as a craft.

FEATURE

Knit one, pearl one: Textiles student Steph White enjoyed the varied attractions at the Knitting and Stitching Show, right

She said: "Patchwork is a worldwide thing – they even found it in the pyramids. It came over to England and America as a resourceful way of reusing old scraps of material, but a lot of quilts produced nowadays are very intricate and use really rich fabrics.

"Some of our members make quilts as bedspreads and others make very decorative pieces for wall hangings. It's very relaxing and the social element is very important for our members too – you make friends and meet up and compare your projects.

"I've always had a big bag of scraps and made children's clothes and things since my mother taught me to sew when I was a young girl. This is why we're so pleased it seems to be coming back into schools."

So, whether it's an urge to recycle, a desire to make money or simply chat with friends and enjoy the satisfaction of making something from scratch, it seems the "in thing" to pick up a needle and thread.

The evidence is clear that, stitch by stitch, sewing and knitting are making a comeback.

Rubbish site: The 2.4-hectare site in Marsh Lane

Ten places listed as possible sites for new rubbish sorting plants

Overgrown: The proposed site adjacent to Hollickwood Park in Muswell Hill

By Lucy Purdy

A FORMER sewage works next to a golf course and an industrial site near allotments have been named as possible sites for new rubbish sorting plants in Haringey.

The 6.2-hectare spot in Pinkham Way, between the North Circular Road and Hollickwood Park, next to Muswell Hill golf course, and a 2.4-hectare site in Marsh Lane, Tottenham, are among ten options in the North London Waste Plan to treat and recycle domestic, commercial and industrial rubbish from 2011.

They are considered by Haringey Council to be the most suitable spots in the borough.

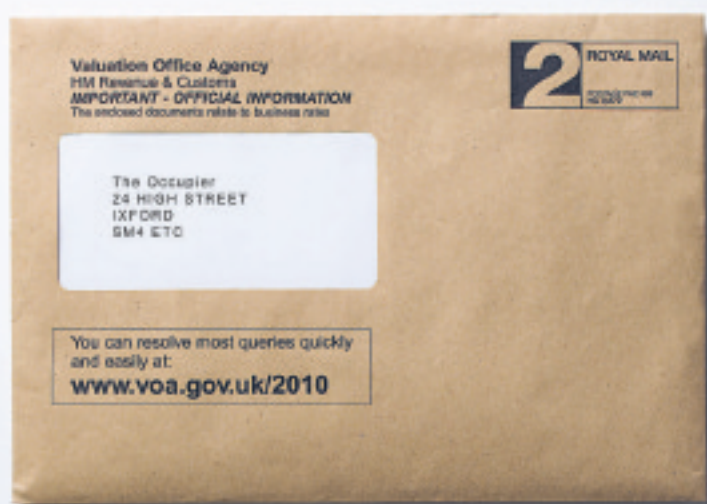

From this week, residents are being asked for their views as those responsible for dealing with waste in seven north London boroughs consider how best to reach the capital's target of dealing with 85 per cent of its own rubbish by 2020, while exporting the other 15 per cent.

Councillor Nilgun Canver, cabinet member for safer communities at Haringey Council, said she realised the scale of the challenge. But she added: "Well-designed facilities can bring many benefits and opportunities.

"It's crucial we find the right sites and put in place the right policies to help ensure the new waste facilities are well designed, good neighbours and fit for purpose. These are opportunities for new jobs, new types of green industries and for local heat and energy systems that can help in the fight against climate change."

A drop-in session where residents can discuss the plan will be held at Haringey Civic Centre, in High Road, Wood Green, between 2pm and 8pm on November 2. The report, showing the proposed sites, is available to view at www.nlwp.net as well as at libraries and council offices.

Card sharp: Last year's winner Louisa Owen, from St Aidan's Primary School, Stroud Green, with Lynne Featherstone MP

Creative children urged to put Santa in picture to win

CHILDREN in Hornsey and Wood Green are being asked to design Christmas cards in a competition organised by Lynne Featherstone MP.

The eventual winner will have his or her design included in a card sent to thousands of residents in Ms Featherstone's constituency in December.

Youngsters are being asked to pen pictures on the theme of "Santa Claus Is Coming To Town" and need to submit entries to their schools by November 6. The competition is open to pupils at all primary schools in Hornsey and Wood Green.

Ms Featherstone said: "I'm really excited about the competition this year – each year local children amaze and surprise me with their creativity and fantastic ideas."

Life is a cabaret at Lauderdale, so JONATHAN LOVETT talks to old chums Ray Shell and Nicole Faraday...

A new season of cabaret starts at Lauderdale House

THE prestige of Lauderdale House's Cabaret has now reached the point where it can attract some of the biggest names of stage and screen. London's longest-running cabaret event of its kind has just launched its 18th season with another roll-call of the West End and TV's finest including the multi-talented Ray Shell and TV regular Nicole Faraday.

Perhaps in respect to their years, our photographer placed the spritely Nicole on the top of the climbing frame at the nearby adventure playground for the shoot while the slightly more mature Ray took it easy on ground level.

"It's my age," said Ray, laughing. "We'll let the kids play on top."

"I was in a production of Starlight Express in Germany recently and that was hard work. But the main reason was because it was in German and I rather mangled the language! But you do these things and learn from them and I have a mortgage to pay."

Cabaret crew: (Bottom) Shona White, Tim McArthur, Ray Shell, (Middle) Valerie Cutko, Gabriel Vick, (Top) Nicole Faraday

Back in 1984, Ray was in the original production of the musical Starlight Express as the youthful Rusty. Did he have an inkling in rehearsals that his show was about to become one of the biggest hits in musical history?

"Yeah, because it was unlike anything I'd done before," he said. "I mean, we were on rollerskates and it was the same team behind Les Miserables and it was the most expensive show of its age."

A man of many talents, Ray is artistic director of north London theatre company Giant Olive as well as being the celebrated author of the novel Iced which, he told me, is currently being optioned as a major feature film starring Will Smith.

If Ray's book had been set in the clink then Nicole Faraday would certainly have been joining Will Smith on set. The former star of ITV's Bad Girls exploded into our living rooms as the devious murderess, the wonderfully named Snowball Merriman, in the women's prison drama, before taking another role in the musical version of the show and is just about to embark on another porridge play – although this time she's a goodie on the right side of the bars.

"It's called The Pros, The Cons And A Screw and this time I play an officer – the only woman on stage with nine men!" she said. "My family are all upstanding, moral citizens and I'm at a loss to know why I keep ending up in prison! But Snowball was brilliant fun and it was the best job I have had."

There can't be many parts where you blow up a prison, escape four times, shoot a boyfriend, kidnap a governor and then hang yourself!"

When not doing bird, Nicole has developed a nice line in impersonating some of the most glamorous female celebrities – Marilyn Monroe, Jerry Hall and Agnetha from Abba – but hopes that one day the spotlight will be on her.

"Wouldn't it be lovely to get to iconic status and have someone play me?!" she said, chuckling. "But I've always been good at impersonating other people and would love to do a tribute to Karen Carpenter – my favourite singer."

● Ray Shell performs cabaret this Sunday and Nicole Faraday performs on November 22. The season takes place at Lauderdale House in Highgate Hill, Highgate every Sunday until December. For details, call 020 8348 8716.

Hats off:
Peeling
an apple

Core blimey – apple day is full of flavour

THE humble apple took centre stage in Hornsey on Saturday during a day to celebrate the peak of the English growing season. Visitors crunched their way through more than 20 different varieties of the fruit at Hornsey Vale Community Centre, in Mayfield Road, and were also able to turn their windfalls into bottles of nutritious apple juice using an apple press loaned by the London Orchard Project. The day, organised by the Tree Trust For Haringey and Sustainable Haringey's food group, featured traditional games such as apple bobbing and a contest to peel an apple in one long strip.

People also shared their recipes for autumnal treats including apple pie, apple chutney and apple jam. Sustainable Haringey is hoping to map the borough's apple trees, particularly those not harvested, collect the fruit and redistribute it in an "urban harvest" scheme.

LUCY YOUNG

Taste test: Visitors of all ages tried the different apples

Get online day 2009 – You could be a part of it!

HAVE you heard people talking about all the wonderful things you can do online but don't know how to get started? Are computers and the internet a total mystery to you? Or would you just like to brush-up your skills? If the answer is 'yes', then you'll find all the help you need with computers and the internet during Get online day 2009!

Get online day is taking place on Friday 23 October 2009 and we are inviting you to be a part of it. Get online day is about helping you get to grips with computers and the internet at your own pace with friendly people on hand to help; whether you're a complete beginner or you know the basics but want to know a little bit more, Get online day is for you.

Between Monday 19 and Saturday 31 October, Get online day events will be taking place at approximately 700 participating UK online centres across England, and we would like you to join us and thousands of others to be a part of it. You can find your local UK online centre in community centres, libraries or internet cafés on high streets. UK online centres specialise in helping people to use computers and the internet, providing people with free, or low cost, help and support to get started.

Ex- Coronation star, Johnny Briggs, is backing Get online day '09. Johnny said, "I'm part of Get online day '09 and you could be too. "I bought a laptop a year ago and I'm ashamed to say it's never been out of the box. When I heard about Get online day I decided to make October 2009 the month I got to grips with computers and the internet by visiting my local UK online centre.

"Along with thousands of others, I'm taking on the Get online day '09 challenge and facing my fears – why don't you be a part of it too!"

If Johnny's story sounds familiar then don't worry you're not alone. Research shows an estimated 12 million people across England still don't use computers and the internet. At your local UK online centre, you'll find lots of people – just like you – who are learning about the internet for the first time and doing their bit to be a part of Get online day '09.

Johnny Briggs is being a part of Get online day '09 and you could be too.

What's more, during the economic downturn being online can help you to save time, hassle and most importantly money and could even open doors to a new job. Research has shown that 87% of employers thought that internet skills helped with a candidate's employability, whilst employees with internet skills felt 25% more confident about finding and doing a new job than offline workers.

47 year old, Natalie Spencer is a great example of how being online can really make a difference. Natalie started a new job and soon found herself needing computer and internet skills so she turned to UK online centres for help. Natalie explains: "I've worked all my life but I'd never so much as touched a computer, I'd never needed to. I thought it was something I'd just be able to sidestep until I retired. I always thought it was too complicated, expensive and something that I could do without. When I told my manager I didn't know how to use a computer I could tell by the look on his face that he was disappointed."

It soon became clear that using computers would be a major part of Natalie's role. Worried about letting her team down Natalie was desperate to get up to speed. When a friend told her about UK online centres – the people behind Get online day – she visited her local centre and they introduced her to myguide, an easy step by step guide to the internet. Natalie continued: "I'd encourage anyone to get down to a UK online centre, get onto myguide, and to get the help they need to get to grips with computers and the internet. If there's a level before beginner that's where I started, and if they can help me they can help anyone. Plus with Get online day round the corner there really is no excuse! It doesn't matter if you've never touched a computer before – and it doesn't matter if once you've had a go you decide it's not for you as the Get online day events are free so you have nothing to lose."

Get online day is supported by Ofcom, NHS Choices and Intel. There are hundreds of Get online day events taking place at UK online centres across England on and around Friday 23 October. If you want to get a helping hand from someone to get going online, just call 0800 77 1234 to find your nearest Get online day event and be a part of it.

If you're already online but you know someone who isn't, make sure you tell them about Get online day and help them to take their first steps online. To find out more including where your nearest event is visit www.ukonlinecentres.com/passiton and help your friends and family get online on Get online day!

New cancer centre welcomed by man saved by his brother

By Lucy Purdy

A MAN whose life was saved by cutting-edge technology and a bone marrow donation from his brother has welcomed the opening of London's first specialist cancer centre.

Michael Durham, 57, of Lorne Road, Stroud Green, was given just three years to live when he was diagnosed with chronic lymphocytic leukaemia in 2004.

At first, doctors said no treatment was available, but advances in pioneering medicine led to him being offered a stem cell transplant a year later.

Michael's older brother Stewart, who lives in Scotland, was declared a perfect match and his healthy cells were used to replace Michael's cancerous ones.

Now five years later Michael, a freelance journalist, believes the treatment has been a complete success.

"The diagnosis was a complete shock and obviously very distressing," he said.

"Previously, this would have been a very dangerous procedure but now it's much safer. They told me the treatment would make me feel like getting old and then young again, which was very accurate. I couldn't climb the stairs at home but now I go for five-mile runs and go cycling. In fact, I struggle to remember I've been through this. It's completely changed my outlook on life."

Last week saw the opening of a specialist Cancer Research UK Centre at University College London – where Michael received his treatment.

"Because your immune system gets wiped out during treatment, I was never actually admitted to the hospital itself," he explained. "I stayed in a four star hotel over the road. It was very bizarre!"

Michael described his brother as "marvellous" throughout the donor process and encouraged people to join the national bone marrow register, which allows them to be called upon to donate cells in the future.

Visit www.anthonynolan.org.uk to find out more about bone marrow donation.

Grateful to be alive: Michael Durham

Shot while holding toddler

A MAN holding a toddler was shot with a stun gun and stabbed in the neck in a masked raid in Tottenham earlier this month.

Police have released details of the attack on October 9 in the hope witnesses may come forward.

The 32-year-old man was at home in Rosebery Avenue when he answered the door to two men wearing balaclavas at about 2.30pm. He was taken to hospital after being attacked and received four stitches to his neck. The child was unhurt. Detective Suzie Chantry described it as "a particularly nasty attack".

Call her on 020 8345 0870.

Trust fails to protect children

HARINGEY's health trust has been slammed for failing to train staff to spot the signs of a child abuse.

An official report by the UK's health regulator, the Care Quality Commission, found NHS Haringey had failed in seven key areas in the past 12 months, including breast cancer screening rates and cutting the number of teenage pregnancies.

Haringey was one of nine London health trusts which failed to meet basic standards on child protection, following widespread criticism over the death of Baby Peter Connelly.

The trust was given an overall rating of "fair" and rated "good" for financial management.

Tracey Baldwin, NHS Haringey chief executive, said: "Where we didn't reach the level of performance in our services that our residents should receive, we have put in place measures to make significant improvements and these are already showing benefits. This includes strengthening procedures to identify and protect vulnerable children."

Only a few days left to apply for school places

PARENTS in Haringey have only a few days left to apply for secondary school places for next year.

Applications, in which six schools can be listed in order of preference, have to be in by Friday and parents can now apply online.

Councillor Lorna Reith, cabinet member for children and young people, said: "It is so important that parents make sure their child is registered for a place in 2010. School places are not reserved automatically, so we need parents to apply now."

SHOWCASE

Hatching a plot to get chicks learning

ALRIGHT, ducky?!

It's another feather in the cap for Jacksons Lane which welcomes the famous Little Angel Theatre for a half-term treat this Saturday.

The Islington-based group travels up the Archway Road to the Highgate venue to perform its adaptation of Handa's Hen - Eileen Browne's follow-up to her successful children's book Handa's Surprise. But what is the appeal of the books?

"There is quite a lot of repetition - different animals, different fruits - which is like a counting game and great for younger children," said director Marlene Vermeulen. "It's also set in Africa so, on stage, we'll have the chance to explore some exotic locations and music."

To illustrate the story of Handa and her friend Akeyo who go looking for Grandma's black hen, Mondli, Marlene and her team will be using 55 different puppets - mainly rod and string puppets.

"But the book was not so easy to adapt for the stage," said Marlene. "Because there is all this counting and not much story! So we've added music, rhythms and sound and woven in a bit of a story involving a dramatic climax for Mondli."

And as well as being entertaining the show also promises to be educational for children and adults with counting lessons in Swahili for no extra charge!

● Handa's Hen runs from Saturday to next Wednesday. Tickets cost £7.95. Show times vary. For more details and reservations call the box office on 020 8341 4421.

Cunning tale is pulled down by poor tail end

Fantastic Mr Fox (PG)

Dir: Wes Anderson
Starring: (Voices of) George Clooney, Meryl Streep, Jason Schwartzman

WITHOUT Wes Anderson the world of film would be a duller place.

Rushmore, The Royal Tennenbaums and The Darjeeling Limited are delightful oddities that rescue us, for a short time, from the humdrum monotony of life.

For his first animation it therefore seems logical he would choose a Roald Dahl, a children's author famed for his idiosyncrasy, and for the first half the two fox trot beautifully.

On a stunning golden landscape - the attention to detail and colours throughout is remarkable - Mr Fox contemplates another daring chicken-killing spree with his wife. Surviving a close shave he vows to change his ways, substitutes murder for writing a newspaper column, and moves himself, wife and child Ash to a new home overlooking the farms of feared threesome Boggis, Bunce and Bean.

But unable to tame his nature he's soon pilfering again with his yoga-obsessed nephew Kristofferson - Ash is a little too oddball, a classic Anderson character - triggering a war with the terrible trio that results in a blitz of burrowing and vulpine virtuosity.

From the start we're in love with the fantastic foxes - voiced by Clooney and Streep - while Anderson's funny asides and characters, particularly the miserable farmers, set the scene for what should be a riotous second act.

And then... nothing... really... happens. The plot does not go anywhere but, like the constant digging, goes back on itself, and we get a little tired of the whimsy, missing the slightly disturbed, more interesting edge that Dahl's books are famed for and which a recent film like Coraline delivered in style.

I also got a little grumpy over the need to set it in America, although, in return, we do get a bizarre appearance from Jarvis Cocker as a completely random musician called Petey and, in general, the soundtrack is superb with the highlight being the Stones' Street Fighting Man played in synch to some ferocious burrowing which Anderson contrives to look like the cover of The Rolling Stones: Hot Rocks Greatest Hits album. Now that's fantastic.

KINGS GROUP LETTING SEMINAR

Thursday, 24th September, 2009

KINGS GROUP recently held their first Landlord's Seminar at the De Vere Theobalds Park in Cheshunt, on Thursday 24th September.

The event was open to all Landlords, whether they have one property or several, and was an opportunity to listen to various speakers associated with the Lettings Industry, as well as meet the Kings senior management and lettings staff. Also there were the Financial Advisers on hand from Thomas Oliver Wealth Management, as well as Metropolis Surveyors, to answer any questions that Landlords may have in relation to the market, legislation, and finance.

Key note speakers included:-

Ian Potter – ARLA, David Smith Smith – Paine Smith, Homelet, Kevin Baker – Inventory Clerk, and the newly formed Lloyds Banking Group.

Landlords were given an insight to the changes in regulation, the impact of the "credit crunch," as well as ways how they can make their investment work better for them, and avoid some of the pitfalls that many Landlords can fall into.

The event was well attended, and was followed by an opportunity for the guests to meet the speakers and ask questions, as well as talk to the different staff from the Kings Group businesses.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all our guests for attending, and to our speakers, some of who travelled a great distance to be there.

Thomas Paine, Partner at Kings Group, said of the event, "This is a major event for us and the first of what we would hope to be a series of events we are planning to hold, not only covering lettings, but other aspects of our business. We would hope that our guests here this evening, have found it both informative and useful, whether they are new or established in the lettings market."

This event is planned to happen on an annual basis, and future seminars planned are a Wealth Management and Financial Services Seminar for guests in 2010.

For any advice on any aspect of our services, please call us on 01707 872 000, or e mail us at helpineadvice@kings-group.net

BE A MULTI-SKILLED ENERGY ASSESSOR

Regardless of the recession, a new European Directive now legally requires an estimated 2.5 million homes and commercial properties being rented, sold or built to have an Energy Assessment this year alone. And more 'green environmental' laws are coming!

For example next year nearly every commercial property with air-conditioning must have an Assessment before the January 2011 deadline.

Applicants are therefore required to train now as multi-skilled 'Property Professionals' to carry out commercial and air-conditioning Energy Assessments and many other roles such as Flood and Fire Risk Assessments, Energy Audits, Insulation Surveys, Property Valuations, Home Condition Reports, Public Buildings Assessments etc.

No previous experience is necessary, training to join this new growth industry can usually be taken around current job at our nationwide training centres approved by the Government-appointed Awarding Body for the Built Environment and is subsidised. On qualifying start your own energy business, work for other Assessment Providers or be available for potential full or part-time work through our Energy Assessor Panel with earnings of £50 to £1,500 per Assessment.

STAMP IT OUT

By Lee Husson

JERMAIN DEFOE was subjected to an angry dressing down by Harry Redknapp in front of his Tottenham Hotspur team-mates after a needless red card against Portsmouth which could have cost the side the game, according to his manager.

Redknapp was furious when the England striker stamped on Aaron Mokeona after reacting badly to a fair challenge by the Pompey midfielder in Spurs' 2-1 win on his and his boss' return to Fratton Park.

Spurs were forced to cling on to the lead with ten men for the last half-hour, after goals from Ledley King and Defoe had put them two up.

Spurs flop Kevin-Prince Boateng pulled a goal back for Portsmouth, but the visitors were able to hold out for the win, and saw them climb up to third in the table.

"He's sorry for what he's done, I gave him a rollicking in front of all the lads," said Redknapp – who will be without Defoe for league matches against Stoke and bitter rivals Arsenal, as well as the last 16 Carling Cup clash against Everton.

"He can be a bit like that at times, he has to learn to curb that.

"I couldn't have told him more. I sat him down at half-time and said to him 'don't do anything silly. We can't afford to go down to ten men here. We have to have 11 on the pitch. Don't let us down'.

"He let himself down, and he let us down as well.

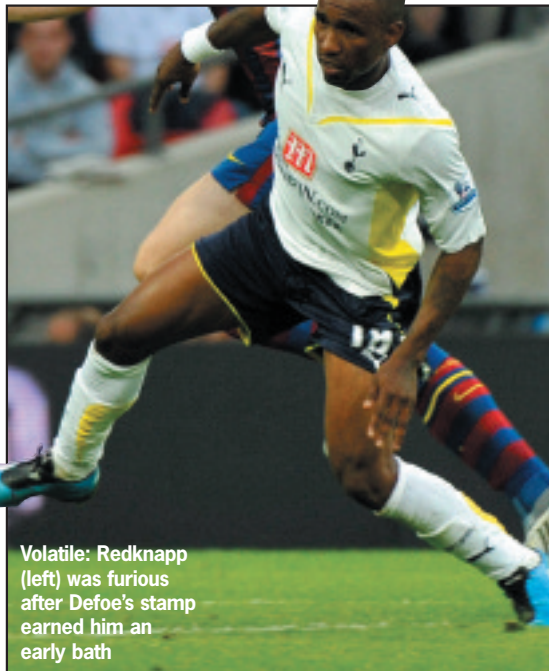

"He could have cost us the game. The way he reacted, it was disappointing."

Club captain King however hailed the new-found resilience of Redknapp's Spurs in grinding out the victory despite their numerical disadvantage.

"This is a result we probably wouldn't have got in previous years," he said. "It shows the resilience we now have. There's more steel in our squad these days.

"It was backs to the wall stuff when we were down to ten men, but we hung in there as a team and our keeper pulled off some great saves.

"Now we're up there at the top and I'm delighted."

'Boro record overdue win

THREE goals in a ten minute spell enabled Haringey Borough to see off Langford at Coles Park on Saturday – and record just their third Spartan Premier Division victory of the season.

Borough went into the match with only goal difference separating them from the foot of the table, but they produced a solid defensive display to withstand early pressure from their visitors and ease to a 3-0 win.

The home midfield gradually began to take control as the half progressed, and they took the lead on 37 minutes when skipper Bosun Adebaki won the ball down the right and delivered a low cross into the penalty area which was driven into the net by George Sifonios.

Borough doubled their lead six minutes later. Billy Haspineall produced a storming run down the left and forced his way to the byline before delivering a cross which the on-rushing Charlie Douse powered home with a diving header.

With the hosts now rampant, it was little surprise that they sealed the win in the opening seconds of the second half – Tolu Popoola netting with a dipping 25-yard cross-shot that deceived Langford keeper Scott Walters.

Haringey Borough host Harefield United on Saturday (3pm), and go to Kingsbury London Tigers in the Premier Division Cup on Tuesday.
